CORE TRANSITIONS

Student-to-Student Mentoring Program

Core Transitions is a program that creates an opportunity for schools to intentionally engage their incoming students through relationships. It is based on the power of student-to-student mentoring, where every incoming student in a school is mentored by an accomplished and caring upperclassman.

Younger students often have a difficult time adjusting to a new school. This transition period is when many students feel “disconnected”, give up, or display at-risk behavior.

Core Trainings recognizes that upperclassmen possess an incredible advantage in shaping the lives of younger students. The Core Transitions Mentor Program provides a “system” to recruit and mobilize a team of upperclassmen to offer friendship, support and guidance for these younger students as they begin their journey in their new school.

How Does The Core Transitions Mentor Program Work?

Incoming Students

Will be matched with an upperclassman, easing school transitions and providing ongoing support and guidance for academic and social success.

School Staff

A small core team will be trained to recruit quality mentors and have the option of being trained in the monthly curriculum provided by Core Trainings.

Mentors

Each month (for six months), mentors enter the classrooms of the younger students to facilitate activities and discussions designed to address key issues that students face.

Core Leadership Team

This team of students will be specifically trained to be the driving force of your program as they assist the staff and school in implementing the Mentoring System.

At The Core

- * Younger students are now connected to someone who cares to help steer them through the social mine fields and reach new heights in personal success.
- * By creating positive “connections” and behaviors among students, schools experience a positive impact in student involvement.
- * This unique, student-led program, enhances leadership skills for the accomplished older students, and teaches them how to develop positive relationships.

Core Transitions- A Powerful And Effective Program To Connect Students To Students And Students To Your School...

“This program taps into one of the most under utilized resources in schools today – the students. Core Transitions identifies, trains and empowers students to transform the school culture, and in doing so, causes attendance rates to rise and failure rates to fall.”

“Mentors develop such a strong sense of purpose while freshman realize, sometimes for the first time, that someone REALLY cares about how they do, the decisions they make and their happiness.”
